

Dydd Mawrth 21 Mai

Rapidly, Cookie and Anne were breathlessly and desperately trying to catch Roach from destroying the human race. They stumbled across a automatic door and looked up in gear, as they saw a huge building that they've never encountered, it looked like a human eating monster! How would they ever find Roach in this tower of terror?

As they stood in front of the cockroach squashing automatic door their worryness grew. They were desperate they had to get inside the monstrous building but they didn't know how to complete this competitive task. All of a sudden Cookie saw his salvation, a teenager was about to pass through the entrance. Her purse was enormous. They had to jump! It was now or never!

With one giant attempt they both huddled themselves into the purse. It was TARDIS like inside (Bigger on the inside smaller on the outside), full up by tissues and a communication device. When they were inside the two cockroaches scrambled for self-determination. Shocked and surprised they viewed at the amazing sight before them. A magical moving stairs transferring humans from one place to another. Human nibbles was arranged in inter-linked order. However the most horrid thing on their skyline was lots of crusty weapons. They hoped the humans don't use the tools against them.

Roach was silently stralling towards a cereal pyramids big as the great pyramid of Giza. To his joy he saw his perfect opportunity, to have payback from the humans. He ran as fast as a cheetah to his objective. He waited for the silly people to get close to the pyramid. He got ready. He stood steady. He pushed. However something fell on him...

Cookie and Anne were getting urgent. They had been searching for a long time but they had found what they were looking for. Excitedly they scuttled closer and closer. To their terror they noticed that something was wrong. Roach was trapped like a bird in a cage, stuck in the middle of the fallen cereal boxes. He was glued in the collapsed pyramid. Both Cookie and Anne dashed to the demolition and climbed up it. Without them being caught they still ascended and stopped by his head. They grabbed Roach's arm, they yanked and they pulled. Cosh! All of a sudden Roach was free and as fast as they could, rapidly the two cockroaches jumped to the ground. Roach was still hurt. They had to heal him some how.

Both cockroaches heaved Roach with a deep breath and pulled him out of the shop. Luckily they were able to evade this tower of gear without them being caught by the horrible humans. As they appeared into the sun Roach began to degrease like a ice cream melting on a spring afternoon. The normally cautious cockroaches now resembling a crying cockroach. Cookie scuttled with raging fury at his cousin's stupidity. Surprisingly he apologized for what he had done. Cookie was thankful but suspicious as he knew that this is pass, bally would not be the final time he would do something like this.